Petersburg, Va. June 3.—The ceremonles attending the unveiling of the inemorial windows in old Blandford Church this afternoon, to commemorate the valor and preserve the memory of Confederate soldiers, the remains of Some 30.000 of whom, representing all of the Southern States, rest within the sacred grounds of Blandford Cemetery, were beautiful and impressive. The church was crowded to its capacity and a large throng stood outside and around the edifice.

The ceremonies were under the direction of the Ladies' Memorial Association, and there were present as guests the veterans of A. P. Hill Camp, the Daughters of the Confederacy, representative people of Petersburg and prominent representatives of the several States whose windows were unveiled.

A Memorial Chapel.

Historic old Blandford Church, built in 1735, and abandoned as a house of worship over a century ago, has been converted into a beautiful memorial chapel by the Ladies' Memorial Association. While the city has always preserved the ivy-clad walls and roof of the Memorial Association to restore the interior to its original design. The pulpit was restored, the galleries rebuilt, the floors relaid and the walls replastered, and the Interior of the church is a practical renewal of the objects for which it was organized in 1856. It has not only gathered from their scattered and neglected graves around Petersburg the hastily buried bodies of the Confederate dead definition is 1868. It has not only gathered from their scattered and neglected graves around Petersburg the hastily buried bodies of the Confederate dead and given them Christian burial; it has not only, by unfaitering devotion, kept alive the glorious memories of Southern valor, but it has advanced further in the creation of a noble memorial, an enduring memorial, in the establishment of this splendid memorial chapel.

All but three of the States have responded to this pariforic call, and the three missing ones—Florida, Georgia and Texas—have promised soon to have their windows in place. The windows are all of the same size—nine and a half feet long by three and a half feet long by three and a half feet wide—and are all of the same general design and cost, with the exception of the apostolic figures, the foliage and delicate coloring. SCOTT BILL OPPOSED.

Wilmington Chamber of Commerce Declares Measure is Peralcious.

Wilmington, N. C., June 3.—Predicating its action upon the statement that "since the time of Adam Smith the value of future contract trading for the marketing of annual crops and products has been an accepted theory and established fact." and that despite possible abuses of administration, it cannot be doubted that the theory and practice have proved beneficial factors in the world's commercial development; declaring that since the principle of future contract trading is price equation, based on prospective demand for a protracted period, whereby a movement of the commedity is not the sole determining factor in price making, and that without this system of marketing a commodity like cotten, the producer would be entirely at the mercy of the spot dealer, and that fluctuations, if not so creatic, would during the year measure wider variations with greater resultant loss to the grower, the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce to-day adopted unanimously resolutions characterizing the Soott bill, now pending in Congress, as pernicious interference with commercial freedom and law, and calling upon Senators and Representatives in Congress to examine carefully into the subject of future contract dealings, and, if consistent with their conclusions, to oppose the enactment of the measure, and any measure of

Little Girls Learning to Work

GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL CLASS AT METHODIST INSTITUTE.

BIG YEAR'S WORK

One Hundred Children to Take Part in Closing Exercises To-Day.

Nearly 100 children will take part in the interesting closing exercises of the classes of the Methodist Institute this morning, beginning at 11 o'clock. The institute, which is located at Nineteenth and Main Streets, conducts classes in useful industrial work, the Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Dixon being in charge. Miss Seliers, a deaconess trained in settlement work, assists in this work, as do also many, women of the Methodist churches in the city. Children of the lower district of the city compose the classes. Many of them are foreigners, and are taught to speak English after they come to the institution.

This morning there will be an exhibit of the work accomplished by the members of the various classes. The girls will show what they have learned about sewing, cooking and domestic science, while the boys will demonstrate that they can do almost anything up to carpentry. There will also be recitations by the pupils.

One of the pleasing features of the closing days was an illustrated trip given Thursday night in the assembly hall of the institute by O. S. Morton. His itinerary was Egypt and Palestine. Many of his little hearers had never seen a picture show before. Nearly 100 children will take part

He gave as one of the potent reasons for his action his age and declining health. Resolutions of regret and commendatory of the great work done by Dr. Scherer in the cause of Christian education, were unanimously adopted by the board. No provision has yet been made for the next term. Rev Jno. C. Peery, pastor of the Lutheran Church at Lynchburg, was at a previous meeting elected president, his term to begin in 1911. He has also been elected financial agent of the college, and is expected to raise the sum of $50,000, with which to erect new and modern buildings, and equip it in keeping with the demands of the times.

Charleston, W. Va., June 3.—For the purpose of getting revenge on Superintendent D. W. Ferguson and Foreman James A. Rocke, for being discharged and then re-employed at less wages, Robert Mason, a driver for the Lamont Mining Company, at Beth. Kanawha county, disconnected the cable that drew three cars, containing twenty miners, up the 1,550 foot incline, and let the cars crash down the steep slope. This caused the death of John Schultz and Paul Lamair, and probably dangerously irjuring a dozen more.

or John Schultz and Paul Lamair, and probably dangerously ir juring a dozen more.

Mason rode up the slope, occupying the front car, and as the first car went over the crest at the top, he inquired of others on the car if the superintendent and foreman was on one of the cars. When told they were, Mason declared, with an oath, that he would now get even with them by sending them down the slope, and he disconnected the cable. As many of the men as could, jumped, but three of them were carried down the incline with the cars, as they fairly flew through the air. The superintendent and foreman, however, did not get on the cars, but decided to wait until the next trip, and probably owe their lives to that fact.

A warrant has been sworn out for Mason, charging him with murder, but he has not yet been apprehended.
